

We anticipate and plan for many of life's most important events: our wedding, our first home, the birth of our children, vacations, and retirement. We plan ahead so that we can anticipate our family's needs and make sure that all the details are taken care of. So, why do so many people leave life's most significant event to their loved ones to plan during a time of grief? Doesn't it make sense to plan your funeral arrangements ahead of time so that your family won't have to?

At some time or another, most of us have probably talked or joked with others about what type of funeral we might have. But would your loved ones really know what you would have wanted? When you think about it, it just makes sense to take the time to make these important decisions now, together with the people that you love, so there will be no confusion as to what your wishes are.
